

S. 2870 – Amache Study Act:

During World War II, tens of thousands of Japanese Americans, including many American citizens, were removed from their homes and held in internment centers. One such internment center was located on the eastern plains of Colorado in town called Granada. Amache, as the internment center came to be known, was designated as a National Historic Landmark in 2005. This bill directs the National Park Service to study the Amache site for inclusion as a unit of the National Park System.
